

Contents

Author's note	x
Introduction, Catherine Samary	1
 GENERAL OUTLOOK	 13
October 1917-2017: From a decolonial communism to the democracy of the commons, Catherine Samary	15
From the October Revolution to Stalinisation	18
Pursuit of the permanent revolution after Stalin	28
From the 'great debate' in Cuba to a self-managed system	37
Towards a 'society of the commons'?	45
Bibliography	53
 THE YUGOSLAV EXPERIENCE	 61
Yugoslavia since the revolution: a few key dates	63
Yugoslav self-management: a balance sheet, Catherine Samary	66
Socialism and humanism, Zagorka Pešić-Golubović	85
The June student movement and social revolution in Yugoslavia, Svetozar Stojanović	96
From post-revolutionary dictatorship to socialist democracy, Svetozar Stojanović	106
Workers' councils in Yugoslavia: successes and failures, Goran Marković	131
Historical background of the creation of workers' councils	131
Legal solutions	134
Workers' councils and reforms of the system	137
Successes	139
Failures	143
Conclusions	144

OTHER POST-CAPITALIST EXPERIENCES	151
Plan, Market and Democracy: the experience of the so-called socialist countries, Catherine Samary	153
Introduction: theoretical, political and methodological questions	153
Social relations and the plan	167
Yugoslav 'market socialism' with self-management	169
Updating the Soviet debate on the 'law of value'	176
Conclusion	191
Bibliography	203
The law of value in relation to self-management and investment in the economy of the workers states, Ernest Mandel	206
Building socialism in Cuba, Samuel Farber	218
SUMMING UP AND FURTHER DEBATES	229
Chile and Portugal in the 1970s: the left, nationalisations and 'workers' control' in the revolutionary processes, Franck Gaudichaud & Raquel Varela	231
Introduction	231
The debate about 'workers' control', nationalisations and 'people's power'	234
Chile 1970-1973: Allende's government and the nationalisations	239
Portugal 1974-1975: nationalisations against workers' control	243
Co-administration and 'battle for production' versus cordones industriales and people's power?	245
The struggle for political power: workers' control in the Portuguese Revolution	251
Conclusions	258
Latin America: state, popular power and class struggle, Franck Gaudichaud	262
Eastern Europe: revisiting the ambiguous revolutions of 1989, Catherine Samary	279
Ideological bias of Cold War concepts	280
Democratic revolutions or opaque 'refolutions'?	289

‘Transition to democracy’? The German symbol: what about ‘Ostalgie’?	298
The repressed ‘third way’	301
From the Prague Autumn of workers councils (1968) to the Velvet Revolution (1989): continuity or antipodes?	306
The struggles for the commons in the Balkans, The Balkan Forum Commons Working Group	310
Concepts, history and evolution	310
A radical critical conception of the commons	313
Balkans as the European periphery	314
Existing commons struggles in the Balkans	317
Commoning the struggle	323
Bibliography	326
Feminism and the politics of the Commons, Silvia Federici	328
 EPILOGUE	 339
Decolonial communism: Analytical, political and democratic dimensions, Catherine Samary	341
 About the Authors	 348
 Notes	 351
 About Resistance Books and the IIRE	 385