

Table of Contents

Introduction	1
The Circular Economy	3
Why focus on the discipline of Economics?	4
Book Structure	5
Chapter One The Nature of Demand- Consumer Behaviour and Preferences	7
What is demand?	7
Changes in quantities demanded and changes in demand	9
Price elasticity of demand and marketing mix strategy	10
What is the significance of price elasticity of demand to a marketer or to a business?	11
How do consumers/customers make purchasing decisions?	14
Price vs. Value	14
Demand: Ethical and environmental considerations	17
The buying decision by businesses in the private sector	19
Forecasting demand to formulate marketing strategy	20
Big Data	21
Evolution of marketing – from production to sales to customer's focus and digital Marketing	22
Location of demand, supply and market. Focussing on marketing strategies	28
How can marketers influence demand?	30

Chapter Two The Nature of Supply – Organisational perspective in relation to marketing goods and services	33
The Theory of the Firm and Outsourcing and Resourcing Decisions	35
Outsourcing – Your place or mine?	36
Global Sourcing	38
Global sourcing – ethical and environmental considerations	39
Suppliers beware!	40
Offshoring and reshoring to be near to markets	41
Quality	43
Quality in service	45
Gaps in service design and delivery	46
Customer care	46
Flows from supply to demand	48
Middlemen	49
The concept of supply chain	49
E-Commerce	51
Capabilities of the internet	52
E-Supply	54
Customisation	54
Chapter Three Economics of Services	57
Nature of services	57

Marketing mix – From tangibles to intangibles	58
Branding services	60
Product Life Cycle Concept	61
Price	64
Place	64
Promotion	65
Process	66
Physical evidence	67
People	68
Training	69
Appearance	70
Empowerment	70
Employees as customers (Internal Marketing)	73
Chapter Four Pricing. An important aspect of marketing mix	75
Price and changes in demand and supply	75
Price determination	77
Price discrimination. Price elasticity of demand revisited	79
Price fences	81
Marketing mix	83
Activity-based costing	84
Pricing in Marketing	86
Not-for-profit organisations	88
Chapter Five Firms and the Benchmarking	91

Benchmarking. Best practice approach	91
Types of benchmarking	92
Benchmarking without emotions	95
How to benchmark	95
Sources of information	96
Advantages of benchmarking	96
Continuous improvement	97
Process re-engineering	102
Why have some re-engineering initiatives failed?	104
Use of value chain	105
Understanding change initiative	105
Modern literature on benchmarking	107
Chapter Six Mergers, Acquisitions and Alliances	111
Nature of mergers, acquisitions and alliances	111
Mergers, competition and market dominance	113
European law and mergers	114
Which mergers are examined by European Commission?	116
Mergers and acquisition in the service sector	117
Acquisitions	118
Strategic alliances	121
Why form strategic alliances?	121
Alliances: Marketing perspective	122
Chapter Seven Knowledge as a factor of production	125

What is knowledge?	126
Why managing knowledge has become important for all organisations now?	129
Managing knowledge	129
Making a start. Some examples/initiatives	130
Knowledge is also power. Why should employees share this power?	131
Process of knowledge creation	133
Building Marketing Knowledge. Improving effectiveness of internal marketing	135
S.W.O.T. Analysis	136
Conducting S.T.E.E.P. Analysis	137
Economic factors	139
Environmental factors	139
Political factors	140
Marketing knowledge	141
Chapter Eight Globalisation	143
International Monetary Fund	143
World Trade Organisation	144
North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA)	146
The European Union	146
Enter globalisation	147
From comparative advantage to competitive advantage	149
Marketing perspective	151
The advantages of globalisation	155

Current situation after Financial Crisis of 2007-2008	156
---	-----

Chapter Nine Economics of Advertising and Promotion	161
Advertising	161
Marketing perspective	162
Globalisation and advertising	162
Communication models	165
The Constructivist Model	167
What customers perceive, customers must receive	169
Beware of sensitivities involved	170
Digital advertising	173
Promotion	175
Note on product manuals	178
Chapter Ten Economics of Customers	181
Importance of customers	181
Relationship Marketing	182
Relationship Life Cycle model	184
Economics of customer retention and loyalty	186
Customer Loyalty Ladder	186
Reichheld Service Profit Cycle	188
Measuring the economic value of the customer to the organisation (EVCO)	191
Using activity-based costing to calculate EVCO	191
Using discounted cash flow analysis to calculate EVCO	192

Circular Economy	193
Conclusion	195
References and sources	197
Index	205